A General Meeting of the Guild Brethren and

Heritors of the Burgh was called on the 9th and 14th instant, when convened a very full and respectable body, and made choice of Mr Thomas Prentice brewer, Prices, and James Currie writer, Secretary.

The meeting then took under consideration, the arbitrary and self-elect system practised in the appointment of our Town-council, and

Representative in Parliament, and unanimously (the Dean of Guild excepted) were of opinion, that a reform was greatly wanted; that they ought to be restored their natural and ancient rights and privileges; and elected a Committee to confer with the Delegates appointed by the Incorporated Trades.

The Committee having accordingly met this day with the Delegates from the Trades, they all agreed in opinion, that a reform ought to be obtained, and that they would send Delegates to the General Convention at Edinburgh on the 25th March next, on order to concert on the particular mode of application and plan of reform. They likewise unanimously resolved to concur with the other Burghs in this important business till the object was obtained.

appointed the said Prentice, Prices, and Currie, to subscribe

L O N D O N.
Preliminary Articles of Peace between RUSSIA and the OTTOMAN PORTE.

The Imperial Court and the Sublime Ottoman Porte, desirous of seizing every occasion which can tend to conciliate and establish a perfect harmony and friendship between the two powers; and considering the new face of affairs, and state of things in the Crimea, at Tiban, and in Cuba, are likely to occasion discussion, and perhaps a rupture between the two powers, the above Imperial and Ottoman Courts, have resolved to come to a friendly negotiation on the said subject, and after having duly weighed and considered them, are ardently desirous of preventing for the future any subject of contention between them, and also the advantages of a solid and happy peace, of good neighbourhood and established commerce, have found it necessary to regulate their future measures upon a solid and permanent foundation.

In consequence of these resolutions, the above powers have fully explained themselves, each to the other, on the above subjects, and desirous of stipulating the present treaty under the most solemn engagements and exact observance, have chosen, and furnished with full powers to complete the said treaty, the following persons, namely, Her Imperial Majesty, the most August and most Powerful Empress and Sovereign of all the Russias, has named on her part, the high and noble Jacques de Bulhakow, her Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary to the Sublime Ottoman Porte, Councillor of State, and Knight of the orders of Saint Waldimar and Saint Stanislas; and his Majesty the Sultan Ottoman, has nominated on his part, the most honoured and most esteemed Vizir Kussian Pachas, his Grand Admiral, Stambul Cadis, actual Cadislar of Natic, Musti, Zade-Ahmed, Efendi, and his Grand Chancellor the actual Hadgi Mustafa Effendi, which Plenipotentiaries aforesaid, after having mutually exchanged their credentials in due form, have signed and sealed the following articles:

Art. 1. That the treaty of peace of 1774, the convention of the limits of boundaries of 1771, the explanatory convention of 1779, and the treaty of commerce of 1783, shall continue to be strictly and inviolably observed in all their points and articles, save and except the 3d and 4th article of the explanatory convention of 1779, which said articles shall be of no longer weight or obligatory force between the two empires.

But as in the aforesaid 3d article of the said treaty of 1774, it is declared, that the fortresses of Ochakow, with all its ancient territories, shall belong as formerly, to the Sublime Porte, this declaration shall continue in full force and weight, and continues still to be observed as therein set forth.

Art. 2d. It is hereby declared, that the Imperial Court of Russia shall never lay claim to the rights that the Kan of Tartary have formed upon the fortresses of Sandjone-Cafe, and consequently the Court of Russia, acknowledges the full and sole possession to be in the Ottoman Porte.

Art. 3d. That in admitting the river Cuba to be the frontier of Cuba, the said Imperial Court, at the same time, renounces her pretensions to all the Tartar nations beyond the above river, and from the Black sea.

And it is hereby also definitively agreed, that this act, as well on the part of her Imperial Majesty, the most august and powerful Empress of all the Russias, as well as on the part of his Highness the Sultan Ottoman, agreed and confirmed by solemn ratifications, signed and written in the accustomed manner, shall be exchanged at Constantinople in the space of four months or sooner, if possible, to reckon from the day of the conclusion of the said treaty, of which their Plenipotentiaries have made their proper counter parts, signed with their hand writings, sealed with their seals, and mutually exchanged between them.

Done and signed at Constantinople, this 9th day of January, 1784.
(Signed) JACQUES DE BULLAKOWS.

Plenipotentiary from the Empress of Russia, and by the Ottoman Plenipotentiaries above named.

By the preceding treaty, the Empress of Russia acquires, not only the Empire of the Crimea, the Isle of Taman, and a considerable part of Cuba, but an incontestable right to the empire of the Black sea, and thereby the future controul of the commerce of Constantinople, by which also she adds 1,500,000 new subjects to her empire, and deprives Turkey of the resources which Crimea furnished for the supply of the cavalry.

EDINBURGH.
The accounts in different London Papers concerning the meeting of the Westminster Electors in Westminster Hall, on Saturday last, are so very contradictory and inconsistent, that we have adopted none of them, chusing rather to lay before our readers what has been sent us by a correspondent on the subject, which we have reason to believe is impartial.

Extract of a letter from London, Feb. 14.

This day an immense concourse of the zealous inhabitants of Westminster, so early as ten o'clock, were seen in Palace-yard and its environs, and before eleven, Westminster Hall was quite full. Soon after that hour, the two representatives of Westminster, Mr Fox and Sir Cecil Wray, attended by their respective friends; the former by Lord Surrey, Mr Byng, &c. the latter by Lord Mountmorris, Lord Mahon, Mr Pittney, &c. began to sound the minds of the multitude, by setting them an example of waving hats, gloves, and handkerchiefs, &c. At half past eleven Mr Fox appeared on the Hurlings. He attempted to speak, but could not obtain a hearing. A few minutes after, Lord Mahon appeared on the same stage, but with no better success than Mr Fox. A constant cry of "No Coalition! The King and Constitution! Constitutional Liberty!" was kept up by the friends of Sir Cecil Wray. "No Secret Influence! No Back Stairs! No Dark Lanterns!" "Mr Fox and the House of Commons!" resounded on the other. Lord Mahon, being denied a hearing, walked across the Hall, making a signal for the friends of Sir Cecil Wray to follow him. Upon this Mr Fox came forward again. But the opposite party having drawn up quite in the front of the Hurlings, some grinning in his face, others reviling him in the most opprobrious terms, and jostling him about, he seemed not a little discomfited and mortified. The Hurlings mean while gave way, and Mr Fox, with others, fell with the falling scaffold, but without being materially hurt.

He now drew off his forces, being determined to try his strength in a more favourable situation. From the Hurlings he was carried by the multitude across Palace-yard to the King's Arms Tavern. From a window on the first floor of this house he made an ingenious, perspicacious, and elegant speech, of about three quarters of an hour long. The subjects he chiefly insisted on, were, secret influence; the danger of arbitrary power if the Crown should be found able, even on one trial, to controul the House of Commons; the necessity of foregoing all past animosities, of sacrificing pride and ambition, and forming a strong and stable government; and of his own and his party's concessions and advances to conciliation and concord. He was heard with the loudest applause. And after he had finished his speech, the horses were taken from his chariot, and it was drawn home by the people. — A blue flag waving amidst numberless attendants, marked his slow progress to his House in St James's Street. The populace brandished their sticks and fists, and cried out, The Man of the People! The ladies, from the windows of the streets through which he passed, waved their snow-white handkerchiefs; the maids their table-cloths, carpets, &c. and joined in the general acclamation.

When Mr Fox left the Hall, Sir Cecil Wray was seen on the flight of steps, just by the entry to the Court of King's Bench. A loud cry having been raised of "Chair! chair!" an elbow-chair, which some of Sir Cecil's friends had in readiness, was handed over the heads of the people, and he immediately stood up into it, and began to speak. He maintained that the King had a right of appointing and continuing his own ministers. He spoke of the absurdity of moving for the removal of ministry, without bringing a specific charge against them; the daring nature of Mr Fox's East India Bill; the moderation of Mr Pitt's; the claim which the son of Lord Chatham had to the favour of the people; the danger arising from the aristocratical combination; and the grievance of the receipt-tax. "Taxes," he said, "had been the plentiful sources of many disasters. It was a tax that gave birth to the American war." Lord Mountmorris defended the prerogatives of the Crown, and illustrated the connection of these with the liberties of the people. He contrasted the moderation of Mr Pitt's with the violence of Mr Fox's East India bill. He cautioned his audience against the artful insinuations of Mr Fox's eloquence, and begged of the gentlemen who composed that numerous and respectable meeting, not to suffer themselves to be misled by his professions.

Mr Pittney ascribed the present interruption of public business to the daring nature of Mr Fox's East India bill.

The following resolutions were moved and agreed to by the friends of the different candidates:

The friends of Mr Fox resolved,

That this meeting will unremittently persevere in all legal and constitutional endeavours, to obtain a more adequate representation of the people in the Commons House of Parliament, which important branch of the legislature the people most ever regard as the natural guardian of their unalienable rights, and the independence of which is absolutely essential to the preservation of the constitution, as established by the glorious Revolution.

Resolved, That the following address be presented to his Majesty by the Hon. Mr Fox:

WE your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the electors of the city of Westminster, whose names are hereunto subscribed, beg leave to approach your Throne, with the most unfeigned attachment to your sacred person, and to the interest of your Royal family.

To assure your Majesty, that we will use our utmost endeavours to promote the unanimity so essential to the public welfare in the present critical situation of affairs.

And as we have always regarded the Commons House of Parliament as the natural guardian of our unalienable rights, we humbly hope that whatever Ministers your Majesty may, in your wisdom, call to the high posts of government, will hold the sense of that House in the same respect as their predecessors in office have done from the era of the glorious Revolution to the present period.

That your Majesty may long reign in the hearts of a happy and united people, is the prayer of your faithful subjects.

Resolved, That this meeting do now adjourn.

C. J. FOX, Chairman.

The friends of Sir Cecil Wray
Resolved, firstly, That the meeting do approve of and confirm the address to his Majesty, which was agreed upon in the Court of Requests, Westminster Hall, on Tuesday last.

Secondly, That the coalition formed between the Right Hon. Charles James Fox, and the Right Hon. Frederic Lord North, was injurious to the cause of freedom and of public virtue, and that the conduct of the consequent Administration was highly detrimental to the interests of Great Britain and Ireland.

Thirdly, That it is essential to the cause of public freedom, that all ranks and orders of men should unite and associate in favour of a substantial reform in the representation of the Commons; and that this, or any Administration, will deserve the support and confidence of the country, in proportion to the zeal with which they shall bring forward, and endeavour to carry into effect, that salutary measure.

Fourthly, That the parliamentary conduct of Sir Cecil Wray, Bart. has ever been honourable to himself, as well as beneficial to his country; that he is entitled to the warmest gratitude of his constituents, and in the highest degree deserving of their future confidence and support.

Fifthly, (On the motion of the Right Hon. Lord Onghy, which was seconded by the Right Hon. Lord Mountmorris) it was unanimously resolved,

That those men who shall, at this period, endeavour to obstruct the necessary business of the nation, ought to be considered as enemies to their country.

Sixthly, Resolved, (with very few dissentients) That the thanks of this meeting be given to Lord Mahon, Lord Mountmorris, and Dr Jebb.

Sevently, Resolved, That the thanks of this meeting be given to the Gentlemen who compose the Committee, for conducting the business of the Address of thanks to his Majesty, for dismissing his late unpopular Ministers.

CECIL WRAY, Chairman.

Sir Cecil thanked the Meeting for their attendance; and for their attachment to him. He professed his constant desire to preserve their privileges inviolate. — He was now borne on the shoulders of his supporters to the King's Arms Tavern, shaking hands with hundreds as he passed along.

It was doubtful which of the representatives carried along with him the greater number of real electors. It was evident, however, that by far the greater number of people were with Mr Fox. Sir Cecil Wray's friends say, that their party was the most respectable; and they think it no weak argument in favour of Sir Cecil, that he kept the field of battle, while his antagonist was found to take shelter in a tavern. The meeting broke up about two o'clock.

Mr Fox had the honour of having the Earl of Surrey for his coachman on this occasion, his Lordship mounting the box immediately after the horses were taken from Mr Fox's carriage. Mr Burke and Mr Sheridan, at the same time, acted in a different capacity, by placing themselves on the back of the coach.

The report of this day is, that all hopes of a coalition vanish gradually away; and that Majesty, determined not to yield to what is called at Court the Strong Faction in the House of Commons, has resolved to dissolve the parliament. When the minority all comes to be agitated, the Commons, it is supposed, will renew it for one month. The Peers will send it back with the amendment of the space of a year, instead of a month. It will, no doubt, thus amended, be kicked out of the House of Commons, and an appeal will be made to the people by a dissolution of parliament by royal proclamation. It is said that his Majesty is still more offended at Lord N——, whom he considers as ungrateful to him, than at Mr F——, who never professed any extraordinary reverence for Kings.

Extract of another letter from London, Feb. 16.

"The meeting at Westminster turned out very numerous in favour of Mr Fox. A considerable noise and disturbance was at first excited in the Hall, by the adherents of the opposite party, and one more forward than the rest, threw a handful of powder from a bag in Mr Fox's face, which had the effect, for some time, of depriving him of the power of speech. The effect of it was also severe on several persons, who were near Mr Fox. The person who threw the powder, was known to be a servant of Lord M——n. He made his escape, but the bag with the remains of the powder was secured.

"Mr Fox addressed the assembly; but finding he could not gain an impartial hearing, he desired that all who approved of his conduct, would testify their approbation by holding up their hands, when the shew of hands was universal. Mr Fox then adjourned to the King's Arms Palace yard, where he was attended by a more numerous audience than had appeared in the Hall. He made a speech from the windows, which was received by universal bursts of applause. The speech being ended, the electors who were present, to the number of 4000, insisted on drawing his carriage; and he was in this manner conveyed by them to Devonshire house, with universal signs of applause from the multitude.

"The Exeter address, though held out as an address in favour of the present Ministry, is clearly the contrary, being, in substance, the constitutional sentiments of the independent Gentlemen of St Alban's Meeting."

Extract of another letter from London, Feb. 16. Among the independent country gentlemen who meet regularly at the St Alban's Tavern, is our worthy countryman Dempster, who exhibits an illustrious proof, that an erect posture supports its natural dignity and independence, without assistance of fortune.

Is the opinion of a member of the meeting at St Alban's, a coalition is not far distant. The independent gentlemen, in his opinion, are possessed of both the means and the power of effecting that desirable event.

Extract of a letter from an officer of the Edinburgh regiment to his father, dated Portfmuth, Feb. 8, 1784. We arrived here on the 6th all well, on board the George, Captain Thomson, from New York. We were forty-six days on our passage to Falmouth, where we put in, to repair damage sustained in our rigging by the very tempestuous weather had upon our voyage; but, in spite of that, and our long sojourn aboard, thank God, we all kept well. In the middle of next week we expect to proceed for on board the Neptune and Hope transports. The flank companies of the seventy-fourth and eighty-second regiments, come along with us. I wish we may have a good passage, as we will be much crowded. Our regiment does not consist of more than three hundred men.

On Friday, the 6th current, Bailie William Donbar, resided there, a warm friend, an obliging neighbour, and an old man.

On the night between Sunday and Monday last, a house at the College, Glasgow, was broke into, and several articles of value carried away.

Mr Montgomerie having made considerable progress in the Continent, and in our sister kingdom, has, at last, made his appearance here, with pretty favourable symptoms. After a successful attempt by a foreigner, to launch an Air Balloon, has been effected by an ingenious Chymist of this city, who yesterday exhibited one, made by himself, floating a considerable time in Mary's Chapel, being the first we have heard of in Scotland. — Notwithstanding an attempt that befel the case of the Balloon in its carriage to St. Mary's Chapel, by the activity and skill of the maker it was safely repaired in a quarter of an hour, and the exhibition with universal applause. This aerial machine, although of great diameter, is so light as only to weigh two ounces. It is made of thin taffety, and covered with elastic green varnish.

Extract of a letter from Aberdeen, Feb. 16. Since Monday last the storm has continued, and great quantities of snow have fallen: So rigorous a season has not been in this country since 1740.

In this season of general distress among the poor, some of the principal inhabitants of Gilcomston exerted themselves in making a contribution, which was laid out in meal, and divided last week, from three pecks to a peck and a half each, according to the circumstances of the poor families. It is a rare to mention such benevolent exertions, and hope they will stimulate others to follow their example.

On Monday last, was committed to prison, the son of a man in this neighbourhood, accused of stealing two cows and a cow-feeder at Gilcomston; also a young man charged with aiding him, and a stabler for receiving them; but in the course of an inquiry taken before the Sheriff, it having appeared that the cows had been, in November last, redeemed by the owner, when pointing, from the cow-feeder, and by the cow-feeder delivered over to the butcher for his payment, the son was at liberty, on finding caution to answer to any prosecution that may be brought against him, and the young man and stabler were dismissed.

Extract of a letter from Banff, Feb. 11. The storm here is still on the increase, and provisions very scarce; only the charitable Earl of Fife does all he can to relieve the poor, and sells oat-meal at 1 s. the peck, and meal at 8 d. The person employed to sell it out told his wife the other day, that the meal was going off so fast he could only serve his own tenants. "No, no," (says she) "I'll sell to every body; and if any scarcity shall appear, put on my farmer coat once more, and help to soften the hearts of the times." — I wish we had more such Earls planted down poor Scotland! but, alas! there are few of this

"A private express, via Donaghadee, is said to have reached the Castle this day, which confirms the above intelligence."

Saturday evening, arrived at Cork the Lively of and from Newbury, Captain Weyer, by whom we have the Salem Gazette, dated December 12. 1783, which contains the following advices:

The SPEECH of his Excellency JOHN DICKINSON, Esq; to the General Assembly of Pennsylvania, on his election to the Presidency of that State, delivered November 10. 1783.

GENTLEMEN,

I ENTREAT that you will be pleased to accept my thanks for the appointment to the presidency which you have now made, and my assurances that I will try to discharge the duties of that station in the best manner I am able.

Power, derived from the affection of fellow-citizens, is truly valuable, especially to a person who, during the whole course of his life, could never be induced to value any other kind of power.

Yet, whatever pleasure or distinction arises from this evidence of your regard, I cannot but reflect how very short-lived they must prove, unless, by fidelity, integrity, and diligence, I strenuously endeavour to vindicate your proceeding, and thereby to aid my character.

These qualities shall not be wanting; and, as to deficiencies in other respects, it is a strong encouragement to me, that I can confidently rely for assistance upon your wisdom.

Indeed, a vast work remains to be performed, and that requires all the virtues and abilities of every person in the principal departments to accomplish.

To their filial cares is committed a great and respectable state, just delivered from the distresses of war, and yet bleeding with many wounds.

From them the people of Pennsylvania expect measures to evince, that the late disputes have been for a noble opportunity of promoting the general good, and not for the poor purpose of gratifying inferior designs. Guided by these laudable views, they will generously disdain any other revenge than that of diffusing benefits among their opponents themselves. Their enlightened and benevolent minds will readily determine, that he is an enemy to the state, who, in a public post, treats a fellow-citizen as an enemy to himself.

Upon them, among the rulers of America, is turned the attention of Europe, earnestly observing whether, on this continent, we know how to use, as well as how to acquire, empire; whether we are to be envied and admired, or pitied and despised; and in fine, whether, left as we are to ourselves, upon this fair and solemn trial before the nations of the earth, the cause of republicanism shall in our instance be justified by its effects, or shall be condemned, as the introducer of more calamities than it removes.

To them is delegated the sacred trust of realizing the blessings of freedom, for which so many brave men have suffered, fought, or died, and of improving to the best advantage the signal favours which Providence hath condescended to bestow upon the inhabitants of this land.

Motives so grand and so venerable must have their proper influence; and stability of government, good laws, and a veneration for them, all of which are indispensibly necessary, will afford reasonable expectations of other felicities.

But these can never be attained in a commonwealth, unless the members of the community are impressed with an affectionate regard for each other; because, in such governments peculiarly, their private dispositions are perpetually operating on public affairs. Every individual, therefore, should constantly remember, that he is a citizen, as well as a man—that heaven itself has formed the relationship, with all its obligations, by endowing him with reason, and tracing his nature for civil society—that of course he ought to love his compatriots, and be as anxious and active for their combined happiness and honour, as for his own welfare—and he should firmly believe that this is his true interest, as well as his inviolable duty.

It was by thinking and acting in this manner, that the citizens of Greece and Rome, in their better days, were elevated in those republics to the eminent rank in fame, which, even at this distant period of time, engages the universal applause of mankind. The body of the people was animated, as it were, by one soul. From this simple origin sprung their astonishing achievements. Nor should it be forgot, that it was by ceasing thus to think and act, that their degenerate posterity resigned themselves to feuds and discords, and with mutual malice undermining that strength which all their foreign foes could not conquer, at length sunk together, miserably employed in hating and being hated, into irrecoverable confusion and utter destruction.

More recent, and equally mournful, examples of this political truth might be adduced. The same vices, with a baneful regularity, produce in different regions and ages the same consequences; and the factions and divisions among citizens are still found, as by a natural progression, to charge the enraged unreasonable adversaries, blindly intent only on the success of their own ignoble quarrels, into humble and sympathizing companions in the drudgeries of a servitude, which they have thus conspired to entail one upon another. Let us not, with presumptuous rashness, suppose that we can imitate their faults, without experiencing their fate.

Words cannot express how much our guilt must, in perpetrating the like crimes, exceed that of the republics before mentioned. Their misfortunes, and the causes of them, have been providentially transmitted to us as faithful warnings, in records of indisputable authority—all the succeeding improvements of the human mind are freely presented to us, for our use—and to us is sent the light of a holy religion, breathing the spirit of peace and benignity, perfectly explaining the duties of life, and inviting to an observance of them, by the most affecting and sublime considerations.

To offend against such knowledge, thus manifestly offered to our use, is despitely to reprobate the best gifts of the bountiful Creator, and impiously to renounce that kind and social temper, which his immutable law makes the foundation of all private and public happiness.

My ardent desire is, that the people of this state may be governed by better sentiments, so that every one, stedfastly looking to the glorious object that, under the dear name of country,

"I make it my humble and earnest prayer, that America may be free from those calamities, which formerly proved, in the mother country, how essential monarchy is to the enjoyment of constitutional liberty." — Speech of his Britannic Majesty, on the 5th of December, 1782, acknowledging the Independence of the United States.

comprehends the concerns of all, and conscientiously considering its advancement, the collected force of the whole may be uniformly exerted to supply that common fund of prosperity, from which each particular is to draw his share. May the divine goodness confirm these resolutions in us, and grant that there be no contention among us, but who shall best serve Pennsylvania.

For my part, I cannot but consider the union of those who are devoted to the principles of the Revolution, as of special importance; and as I shall ever cultivate the friendship of such men, I have not the least doubt but I shall always receive their support.

To conclude —

GENTLEMEN,

I beg you to be entirely persuaded, that my lips speak a language which my heart dictates, when I say—that I wish for no greater happiness in this world, than to be useful to my fellow-citizens; and for no higher honour, than to be esteemed by them.
